INSURANCE MAN ACCUSED AS SWINDLER

Then Held for Pittsburg Officers.

Trouble Will Be but Temporary.

Arthur G. Marshall, the Pittsburg insurance man, arrested last night in the avenue, at the request of the Pittsburg police, who charge him with embezzling the premiums on $2,000,000 worth of bogus insurance he had written, was today taken to Police Headquarters and, after being photographed, exhibited to the entire detective force.

Marshall was cool and refused to make any statement. While at Headquarters he was visited by William Attelin, who also lives in the Sharon apartments. Mr. Attelln said later.

"Marshall is a friend and I will do what I can for him. He assures me the trouble is only temporary. He came here on Aug. 16 with his wife and nineyear-old daughter Gladys. Mrs. Marshall left several days ago. Last night I heard Gladys screaming that men were hurting her papa and wen, to see what was the matter. Detective Mcwhat was the matter. Detective Mc-Conville explained the situation and I took charge of the girl. Mrs. Marshall will be here to-day." From Police Headquarters Marshall was taken to the Tombs Court and Marshall and Frank D. Dunbar, who Marshall and Frank D. Dunbar, who fied from Pittsburg simultaneously, were the leading officers in the Duquesne Mutual, the North American Mutual and the Lafayette Mutual fire insurance companies, of Pittsburg. They had agencies all over the country and had written policies aggregating upward of $2,000,000 when the Pennsylvania State insurance Department investigated and reported the companies were protecting their policies with unlisted mining stock and other unlisted securities to the face value of only $190,000.

Marshall Photographed and Louis Schroeder, Busy in Rescue. Did Not Note Emil's Danger.

HE REFUSES TO TALK. SAD END TO OUTING.

Assures Friend, However, that Death of Young Man Not Known Until Bath House Closed for the Day.

While Louis Schroeder, of No. 570 Macon street, Brooklyn, was saving the Sharon apartments, at No. 2 Manhattan life of Miss Lydia Winkler in the surf at Coney Island yesterday, his brother Emil Schroeder, was drowned within a stone's throw of him. In the excitement over the rescue of Miss Winkler, the drowning of Emil Schroeder was unnoticed, and was not known until his clothing was found when the Parkway Baths were closed for the night.

The Schroeder boys took the Misses Lydia and Clara Winkler, of No. 185 Harmon street, Williamsburg, to Coney Island for an outing yesterday. During the afternoon the party went into the water. Louis Schroeder and Mass Lydia Winkler are strong swimmers, and went far out beyond the breakers. Louis said to-day that while he and Miss Winkler were beyond the life buoys he noticed his brother swimming toward them. He did not see him again as Miss Winkler called to him for assistance. He went to her and kept her affoat until his signals were seen by the lifeguard, who came out as taken to the Tombs Court and ere held in $2,000 bail for examination and took them inshore on the raft. Clara Winkler from the shore saw her sister's predicament and in her excitement she, too, lost sight of Emil Schroeder.

When Lydia Winkler was brought ashore Louis Schroeder and ner sister assisted her to the bath house, where she was revived and the three dressed hurriedly. They returned to the beach, but could find no trace of Emil. They thought nothing of it at the time, as there was a great crowd in the surfand on the beach, After waiting for a time Louis Schroeder took the Winkler sirls to his home.
